Lucy is a Senior Associate at Hausfeld and specialises in competition litigation. Prior to joining Hausfeld, Lucy worked for Which?, where she advised on competition and consumer law matters, including in relation to large-scale group actions and individual rights of redress.

Lucy has valuable experience of working for a competition regulator, the UK's Office of Fair Trading. She started her career at Slaughter and May, where she subsequently practiced as part of the competition group for two years. Prior to qualification, Lucy spent time in The Hague, as part of the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia.

Lucy has worked on numerous pieces of highly complex, multi-jurisdictional litigation and across a variety of sectors. She has also worked on European and domestic antitrust investigations - for public and private companies, and for the regulator. Lucy has experience of conducting litigation before the Competition Appeal Tribunal, the High Court and the Court of Appeal. Lucy has spoken at conferences on competition and consumer law, in the UK and abroad. She has also appeared before the House of Lords EU Committee to give evidence on aspects of consumer law.
