

Financial Services and Securities

Hausfeld is at the forefront of litigating some of the most high-profile actions involving investment products, securities, and the banking industry in recent years. With global financial markets becoming increasingly complex and global investors facing an unprecedented array of investment options, our breadth of experience allows us to better respond to the evolving needs of investor clients.

To that end, we have assembled a multidisciplinary team of lawyers with decades of experience in business and commercial litigation, securities litigation, commodities litigation, antitrust litigation and consumer protection litigation, both in the United States and in Europe. This team is capable of protecting the rights of investors on any front and across multiple jurisdictions, permitting us to seamlessly advise clients with respect to an array of financial and investment litigation. Our experience helps provide our clients with business-minded counseling on the bottom-line implications of litigation decisions.
