

Edward Nyman

Edward is an Associate at Hausfeld's London office and focuses primarily on commercial and financial services litigation. Prior to becoming an Associate, he trained at Hausfeld which included a placement at Which? where he gained substantial in-house experience, focusing on commercial contracts.

Since joining Hausfeld, Edward has worked on several multi-million pound financial services disputes in the High Court arising from the misselling of complex derivatives and LIBOR manipulation, as well as competition damages claims on behalf of a number of corporate clients.

Qualified as a solicitor in England and Wales, Edward also holds an LL.M in Professional Legal Practice from The University of Law and has co-authored articles on mediation and the use of AI in the legal profession.
