Rogier Meijer

Rogier Meijer specializes in competition litigation, commercial litigation, mass claims and collective actions.

Expertise

Having extensive litigation experience, Rogier specializes in representing parties before the Netherlands courts in various complex (mass) litigation matters such as cartel damages actions and supervisory liability claims.

Prior to joining Hausfeld, Rogier co-founded the litigation boutique firm Zippro Meijer with a focus on plaintiff litigation in the Netherlands. The firm was recommended three years in a row by Global Competition Review (GCR) as the only Dutch law firm at the EU Claimants Bar. The firm continues its litigation practice as Hausfeld Advocaten in Amsterdam.

Before starting his own firm, Rogier worked at the international law firm Allen & Overy LLP in the competition and litigation & arbitration departments.

Rogier was also assistant professor at Utrecht University where he lectured on contract law, liability law, civil procedure and international private law.

PRACTICE AREAS

Competition Disputes

He has dealt with a wide range of competition and civil law matters, including:

- cartel damage claims
- cartel related cases
- unfair commercial practices

Rogier is involved in several cartel damage cases, such as follow-on proceedings in the Trucks cartel, Pre-stressing Steel cartel and CRT cartel.

Commercial Disputes

Rogier has expertise in advising, litigating and arbitrating in the field of commercial disputes including:

- contractual disputes
- liability proceedings
- mass claims and collective action
- State liability / supervisory liability

- Privacy and data breach related actions and damages claims

Rogier is involved in various court proceedings such as proceedings on behalf of a large group of investors against the Dutch Authority for the Financial Markets (AFM).

WHAT OTHERS SAY

Global Competition Review

Boutique firm Zippro Meijer stands out with its focus on plaintiff litigation in the Netherlands, where it has become a significant player. Comprising managing partners Erik-Jan Zippro and Rogier Meijer, along with partner Sander Timmerman and one associate, the firm boasts a client roster one would expect to see at a much larger firm. It is working with Hausfeld on various Trucks cartel follow-on damages claims, and is handling more than 20 proceedings in the Netherlands for its clients. It is also representing Deutsche Bahn and several subsidiaries in a damages claim against a pre-stressed steel cartel, and is defending Samsung in follow-on damages claims before Dutch courts for allegedly participating in cartels to fix the prices of cathode ray tubes. - GCR100, EU Claimants Bar, 20th Edition, January 2020

GCR named Zippro Meijer as the only recommended Dutch law firm for its European Claimant category, noting: "A small yet significant player, the boutique firm Zippro Meijer stands out with its unique focus on plaintiff litigation in the Netherlands." - GCR100, EU Claimants Bar, 2018
