

Arthur N. Bailey, Jr.

Experience

Arthur's primary areas of practice are in consumer, antitrust and other complex litigation matters. He values the opportunity to represent clients of all types who have suffered significant wrongs. Like others at Hausfeld, he is motivated to ensure that all persons, regardless of wealth or status, are able to find justice through the courts. Arthur shares the firm's global vision, its emphasis on civil rights and human rights cases, and its desire to boldly pursue cases that seek to push the boundaries of and developments in the law. He enjoys the legal analysis and critical thinking inherent in overcoming the challenges necessary to successfully solve the client's problems.

Clients

Arthur has litigated cases in the technology, automotive and agricultural industries, and in sports and entertainment law. He also had the privilege of representing the California Teachers' Association and the National Education Association in litigation in the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals and the United States Supreme Court, authoring amicus curia briefs on their behalf in support of the right of gays and lesbians to marry.
